

TAMPA – A student at the University of South Florida started a business that could change traveling for everyone.

“Travelot really specializes on group travel and takes advantage of the fact that people traveling individually might be way more expensive than grouping them up and sending them to the same location together,” Say Dor Lotringer, CEO & Founder of Travelot.

Mr. Lotringer and his two employees work hard to send their clients on trips in groups to save money on hotels, entertainment and flights. Travelot even customizes each and every trip to the educational or entertainment needs of the client.

Travelot is able to grow because of the assistance USF incubator has offered them. Out of 80 or more companies Travelot was chosen to work on expanding its company before graduation. They are given a beautiful working space, mentors and classes on how to grow their business.

Lotringer and his employees are passionate about traveling at an affordable rate and it shows.

“I want to be in schools, do mission trips, I want to send temples, churches to the Holy Land, I just want to make people happy and send them to the places they want to be in,” Says Lotringer.
